From "Woman-Vigil"

Rise, come with the sun to the cheering vineyards!
We are but stars that fade, And thou art human.
Put on thy beautiful garments, O thou beloved,
Thou who art Woman.

Rise, come! Blow out thy tremulous tapers!
Come where the golden tides give cry of warning,
Over the dark, flooding the world with wonder,
Flows the first morning!

Rise, come! Adieu to all of the nations—
Even of this old world thou hast in thy keeping—
Thou who art woman, over the dark of the ages—
Love, the unsleeping!

—Josephine Preston Peabody.
